VIETNAM

Once mainly a cut and sew supplier, Vietnam now boasts a robust wool supply chain including spinning, weaving, knitting and whole garment manufacturing. This vertical integration means designers, brands and buyers can source all their garment requirements from the one country, cutting out logistical times and dealing with many suppliers.

THE WOOLMARK COMPANY AND VIETNAM

The Woolmark Company (TWC) first identified Vietnam as an emerging manufacturing hub for wool textiles in 2012 when the Vietnam textile industry began to focus on moving toward high quality products and production. Since then, we have been working closely with partners throughout the supply chain and currently collaborate with more than 90 partners including flatbed knitters, circular knitters and garment making companies. We have transferred technical knowhow about the manufacturing of wool products, disseminated information about sources of raw materials, chemicals and machines, and organised international trade missions to connect our project partners with buyers. In recent years TWC has worked with domestic brands to produce their first wool collections which have successfully sold in the domestic market.

YOUNGONE NAMDINH CO LTD

YoungOne began manufacturing sportswear and down jackets in Seongnam, South Korea just over 40 years ago. In 2003 they opened their factory in Nam Dinh, Vietnam. To further enhance their capabilities and to encourage and support vertical manufacturing, the materials division was launched, and they now produce both woven and knit fabrics as well as a variety of insulations that are vertically integrated into the manufacturing process. Currently this factory produces fabrics and garments for companies such as Lululemon, North Face, Patagonia and Helly Hansen.

In 2019, YoungOne partnered with The Woolmark Company to run the Innovation Workshop at their Nam Dinh facility. Over the course of five days, four innovative sports and leisure-wear brands were given the opportunity to work closely with the YoungOne textile technicians and their world class facilities to create fabrics using knitting machines (Shima Seiki and STOLL) and circular knitting machines as well as assistance from garment makers to complete fully formed garments. As part of the brief, all fabrications had to contain at least 50% wool and would be subject to testing for Woolmark licensing.

The workshop harnessed the creativity of innovative individuals and brands and gave them the chance to tap into The Woolmark Company and YoungOne's vast knowledge to create interesting and innovative structures that push the limits of wool and could be commercialised in the sports and performance wear markets.
